As Governor General, I am delighted to offer my very best wishes to Dr. John Weinzeig on the occasion of his 80th birthday. I would also like to extend my greetings to those who are paying tribute to Dr. Weinzeig by gathering to enjoy the fruits of his musical talent.

Dr. Weinzeig’s devotion to exploring his musical vision has left Canadians with a legacy of scores and recordings which captures for all time the exceptional depth of his artistic virtuosity. Certainly, his music has enriched our lives and many Canadian composers have been encouraged by the eloquence of his music and touched by his spirit of artistic innovation. While the road to establishing a unique presence in the world of classical music is often fraught with challenges, throughout his career, Dr. Weinzeig’s talent, dedication and passion earned him national and international acclaim. Moreover, his evocative body of work continues to inspire both the musicians who bring his scores to life and the audiences who gather to appreciate his creativity.

In the years since Dr. Weinzeig embarked upon his musical journey, he has made unique and imaginative contributions to Canada’s cultural traditions and community. Truly, he has been among the vanguard of Canadian composers, bringing to our country and, indeed to the world, music which is inspired by our social and physical landscape. RE: JOHN WEINZWEIG -
80TH BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is delighted to have been able to introduce numerous compositions by John Weinzeig to radio listeners over the years, and is proud to be presenting this retrospective concert on CBC Stereo's "Arts National". John Weinzeig's compositions have been performed by such internationally renowned ensembles as The Canadian Brass and Orford String Quartet, and the array of musical talent assembled tonight in tribute to this great composer is a clear indicator of his enduring influence.

Like many Canadians, I became familiar with the music of John Weinzeig through his many scores written for CBC and the National Film Board in the 1940s and '50s. Throughout a varied career as creator, teacher and advocate of contemporary music, he has continually challenged performers, students and audiences alike to stretch their imaginations and musical preconceptions.

On behalf of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, I take this opportunity to wish John Weinzeig a Happy 80th Birthday and thank him for his unique contribution to this country's musical life.

Regards,

Dear John,

On behalf of the Board of Directors, Voting Members and staff of the Canadian Music Centre, I wish to offer you our very best wishes and most heartfelt thanks on the occasion of your 80th birthday.

You were one of the founders of the CMC, and served on its board for many years. As an Honourary Member of the CMC, you still continue to provide good counsel to our organization. The years have not altered your caring and enthusiasm for the preservation and dissemination of Canadian music.

Through your own work, you have contributed immeasurably to the introduction of 20th century sounds to audiences across this country. Through your teaching, you have helped guide the development of several generations of Canadian composers. The professionalism and stylistic diversity of some of your pupils, such as Somers, Adaskin, Schafer, Beecroft and Freedman, is a living tribute to your career as an educator.

In addition, your ceaseless advocacy activities have been instrumental in the establishment of a real professional status for the creative musician in Canada.

Your 80th birthday gives us an opportunity to reflect on your many accomplishments, and to celebrate them. We are grateful for that and reiterate to you our warmest wishes.

Most sincerely,

As a composer, I have travelled a long and hazardous road in search of the tempo of my time. Although elusive, I am still searching.

— John Weinzweig, 1993

John Weinzweig was born in Toronto on March 11, 1913, making tonight’s event a true birthday celebration. The composer recalls his checkered early career: “Between the ages of 14 and 19, I studied the piano, mandolin, tuba, double bass and tenor saxophone, as well as harmony. I played and conducted school orchestras, dance bands, weddings, lodge meetings and on electioneering trucks for a range of fees between two dollars and a promise. I played Pirates of Penzance, Poet and Peasant, Blue Danube, St. Louis Blues, Liszt’s Hungarian Rhapsodies, Chopin waltzes and Tiger Rag. At age 19 I got serious and decided to become a composer.”

He continued his music studies at the University of Toronto (1934-37), where he also founded and conducted the University of Toronto Symphony during his student years. Upon the invitation of Howard Hanson he enrolled at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester N.Y., in the Masters program, where he received his first formal guidance in composition under Bernard Rogers. While at Eastman he discovered for himself the music of Alban Berg and the 12-tone method which was to be a lasting influence on his creative thinking. John Weinzweig is regarded as the first composer in Canada to have made use of this technique.

He returned to Toronto in the fall of 1938 to face the difficulties of pursuing a composing career and hostile reactions to his music from both musicians and members of the public. In 1941 he was invited by the CBC to compose the first original background music for dramatic radio presentations, and the following year he composed his first film score for the National Film Board of Canada. These proved to be an invaluable experience in applying his contemporary ideas to a media that tended towards a conservative sonic background.

At the invitation of Sir Ernest MacMillan, he joined the Royal Conservatory in 1939 as teacher of composition and orchestration, and accepted a professorship at the University of Toronto in 1952, where he developed the composition department through to graduate studies. In 1978 he retired from the University as Professor Emeritus. Among his many talented students are: Harry Somers, Harry Freedman, Murray Adaskin and Phil Nimmons (1940s); R. Murray Schafer, Norma Beecroft, Gustav Ciamaga and John Beckwith (1950s); Brian Cherney, Paul Pedersen, Robert Aitken and John Rea (1960s); David Jaeger, Kristi Allik, Peter Koprowski and Tom Dusatko (1970s).

In 1951 Weinzweig and several of his former students, concerned by the lack of opportunities for music publication or performance of extended works, formalized their ideals and founded the Canadian League of Composers. As the League’s first President, he embarked on a new career dedicated to advocating on behalf of musical creators. For a number of years he served on the Board of Directors of the Composers, Authors and Publishers Association of Canada (CAPAC), including as its President from 1973-75, and later on that of the amalgamated performing rights agency SOCAR. As well, he was co-planner of the Canadian Music Centre in 1959, and Chairman of the International Conference of Composers in 1960.

He has been a recipient of the Canada Council Senior Arts Award (1968) and Honorary Doctorates from the University of Ottawa (1969) and the University of Toronto (1982). For his service to music he was named to the Order of Canada in 1974, and received the Canadian Music Council Medal (1978) and the Order of Ontario (1988). In 1989 Rhombus Media produced a documentary film on John Weinzweig entitled The Radical Romantic, which won a Gemini Award for “Best Performing Arts Program” the following year.

John Weinzweig’s music is described in the Encyclopedia of Music in Canada as characterized by “clarity of texture, economy of material, rhythmic energy, and tight motivic organization.” A notable feature of Weinzweig’s output are the series of Divertimenti. After the success of his Divertimento No. 1 for flute and strings at the 1948 London Olympiad (Silver Medal), he extended this idea of a concerto-like, animated and rhythmic spirit featuring solo winds, such as oboe, bassoon, saxophone, tuba, and the latest for electric horn. The Harp Concerto (1967) and 15 Pieces for Harp (1983) are major contributions to contemporary harp literature, and secured the composer Honourary Membership in the American Harp Society (1984). Having written for a wide array of media through orchestra to unaccompanied instrument, film scores to choral settings, in later years Weinzweig has become particularly interested in the exploitation of the sounds of common speech and responding to the events of everyday life. Triologue (1971), and the more recent Prime Time (1991), are forays into the realm of music theatre.

John Weinzweig’s own daily life is surrounded by creativity, as the family members are all involved in artistic pursuits. His wife, Helen, is a well-known novelist. One their sons, Paul, is a writer and arts consultant, while the other, Daniel, is a film and TV producer.

Richard Henninger wrote of John Weinzweig in 1973 on the occasion of his 60th birthday: “Now, at a time when mainstream twentieth century techniques are a fact of life in Canadian composition, we can look back and realize that, more than any other musician, John Weinzweig was responsible for initiating their useage. With his own music, in the early forties, Weinzweig broke the ground for the rest of us by putting sounds inspired by Berg and Stravinsky before radio and concert audiences at a time when such sounds were sure to meet resistance. By introducing contemporary techniques to a few sympathetic colleagues and students, he generated a small group of like-minded composers which became the foundation of the variety and quality found in Canadian music today.”

Harold Town, the renowned Canadian artist, was commissioned by New Music Concerts to make this sketch of John Weinzweig. Sittings took place in January 1983. Reproduced with permission of the composer.

Internationally, he is known as an interpreter of contemporary music and has commissioned or premiered some 35 works by Canadian composers. In 1981 Mr. Cherney founded the highly successful "Music at Sharon" and as Artistic Director of Chamber Concerts Canada, has designed a series of concerts for young audiences called "Musical Magic". His interest in and devotion to cultural exchange and the promotion of new music around the world have enriched music audiences everywhere. Mr. Cherney has recorded for RCA, Melbourne, Centrediscs, Empreintes Digitales and for most major European radio networks.

Mary Lou Fallis continues to amuse audiences with Primadonna, the Mrs. Bach Show, and her latest, Ms. Mozart. He received the first Canadian Music Citation presented in 1967 by the Canadian League of Composers after conducting the premier of Harry Somers' opera Louis Riel. Mr. Feldbrill's commitment to educating listeners and encouraging young talent is recognized world-wide. Over a span of thirty-odd years he has headed the Orchestral Department of the University of Toronto, conducted the Toronto Symphony's educational concerts, conducted the first concerts of the Toronto Symphony at the Forum, Ontario Place, created and conducted the Toronto Symphony Youth Orchestra, directed The National Youth Orchestra of Canada, taught and conducted at the National University of Art in Tokyo, Japan and was the first conductor invited as guest conductor to Mainland China. In 1986 Victor Feldbrill was made an Officer of the Order of Canada.

Steven Dann studied with Lorand Fenyves at the University of Toronto. Robert Pikler in Sydney, Australia and Bruno Giuranna in Italy and England. After graduating from the University of Toronto he was named Principal Viola of the National Arts Centre Orchestra in Ottawa. He subsequently held this position with the Tonhalle Orchestra in Zurich, the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam and The Vancouver Symphony. He was named Principal Viola of the Toronto Symphony in 1988. As a soloist, Mr. Dann's recent recording projects include the Schubert C Major Cello Quintet and the Octets of Mendelssohn and Gade for Sony Classics on the Stradivarius collection of the Smithsonian Institute. A Quintet, Sextet and Octet of Louis Spohr recorded on Sony Classic is soon to be released.

Divertimento No. 1 for Flute and String Orchestra (1946)

The first in a series of the Divertimento genre was begun in 1945 while the composer was with the RCAF. It was completed the following year in time for its radio premiere by the CBC in Vancouver. The first concert performance took place in Prague in 1947. In 1948 it won the highest award (silver medal) for chamber music in the Arts Division of the London Olympiad and was published the next year. It has since become one of the composer's most widely performed compositions. Its three-movement plan combines a neoclassic outlook with a 12-tone series for each movement employed freely as a source of melodic invention.

Tremoloque for Solo Viola (1987)

The work is cast in the form of an assemblage of 14 segments in a succession of contrasting relationships. The title embodies the central characteristics: the tremulous tremolo, a dialogue element that adds a duo dimension to the solo viola.

Sonata for Violin and Piano (1941)

The composer recalls: "I had just completed the incidental music for 13 radio docudramas employing an orchestra, and I felt a need to re-enter the concert medium — to recapture the extended-thought process. I chose a medium that demanded more lyric expression and less timbric effects — the violin and piano duo. This direction was induced by a 4-note motive with a range of a diminished 5th that coloured the score of the 'Russian' story broadcast on June 1941, just days before Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union. After several weeks of planning, the work took shape; the Russian motive was integrated into a 12-tone series, the violin and piano would be equal partners in a tightly-knit texture of lyric and rhapsodic moods, a solo violin cadenza would constitute the Coda to conclude the piece — all within a single extended movement.

Refrains for Contrabass and Piano (1977)

Commissioned by Joel Quarrington and first performed on New Music Concerts in 1978. During the next three years it travelled with Quarrington on his cross-country tour sponsored by Jeunesses Musicales. The work is based on the juxtaposition of repetitions of a lyrical theme by the solo contrabass followed by a rhythmic interaction with the piano. The range of the contrabass has been extended by a variety of bowings and percussion actions with hands and fingers.

Private Collection (selections)

Private Collection is an open set of songs with lyrics and music by the composer. Most were composed in 1975. They are about anything: an experience, an observation, a fleeting impression. Mary Lou Fallis and Monica Gaylord gave the premiere and in 1977 recorded them for Centrediscs.

I Heard....

While composing at my summer home my concentration was broken by a bird that sang a motive of repeated tones, then repeated it after short intervals in longer and shorter variants. Although my composing activity usually is immune to songs of nature, this bird had me guessing "Which one now?". After several days of this distraction, I decided to retaliate in my own way: I wrote a song incorporating the bird's basic melody. From then on the White Breasted Sparrow lost its hold over me.

Love Love Love

"Sweet love is not what it was". A parody in the manner of 16th century English love songs that recounts the trials of love with over-wrought affectations, broad operatic gestures, mixing nonsense syllables of the Elizabethan era with scat sounds of the modern jazz singer.

15 Pieces for Harp (selections)

15 Pieces for Harp was the second of the two major harp works commissioned by Judy Loman after the Harp Concerto of 1967. The set was composed in 1983. Their wide range of expression, innovative techniques and color have caught the attention of recitalists abroad. They have been recorded by the CBC, choreographed by Ballet British Columbia and included in the syllabus of the American Harp Society's National Competition.

Divertimento No. II for English Horn and String Orchestra

The most recent in the Divertimento series, number 11, is cast in a form similar to the composer's Divertimentos 6, 7 and 10 — an extended movement of 6 interconnected sections that extends the sonic voice of the English Horn beyond its traditional temperaments: the dramatic, playful, a touch of blues, as well as a seldom revealed virtuosity. The role of the strings is dialogue rather than accompaniment. The final section is a set of 3 cadenzas for the English Horn preceded by brief string interludes, after which the solo instrument soars to its top register, recalling the opening motives, now propelled to its conclusion by powerful thrusts of the strings.

SOCAN salutes John Weinzeig on his 80th birthday, an illustrious occasion to be sure! Professor Weinzeig is known in the music community as one of Canada's most distinguished composers, and in the university milieu as a teacher who has guided the careers of many of this country's finest composers. But beyond those endeavors, he is an untiring advocate of composers' rights, having served as a founding member of the Canadian League of Composers, a long-standing director of CAPAC (he served as president, 1973-75) and a member of the first board of directors of SOCAN.

We wish him the very best in this special year and in his future activities.
